PRAISE THE LORD.

McCome City, Miss, March 31, '87. DEAR INTERIOR -I must catch the first month of spring "on the fly," as it goes out, and resume our slightly dislocated corresgoing out in a very leculne fashioo indeed; thus verifying the ancient saying, which certainly does hit the nail on the head often enough to be remarkable.

We are temporarily riding at anchor in this delicious, sougherbor. We have such a delightful "at home" feeling in McComb; and then, too, we are in reach of a PINE-KNOT! The evening we came ilugh was lighting a fire in my bed room and came into the sitting-room to ignite a bundle of ont with every stick in a light hiszy and a room I thought I had never inhaied so dainty the balmiest gale of Araby the Blest, is the smell of a Mississippi pine knot to ma. Let me see. Where were we when last haard from? In Houma, just before that memorable Sunday (three weeks ago, come next Sabbath) when I wea emitten by the cruel hand that does all the emiling. None but the devil could strike a servant of the LORD, going gladly forward to do his dear Master's work and full of longing and desire to lift the bardens from the aching hearts of his fellow men I was on my way to preach to the colored folks at 11 A. M. when the "fiery dart" of the "wicked one" reached its mark. The Sabbath before I had preached for the "colored Methodists." The sad Sunday I had engaged to do like service for the "colored Baptists" Ah, me! these names! these titles of separation in the "one flock!" How inappropri ate they ere! In great enflering I walked to the church, seking the dear LORD to carry me through and strengthen me to preach. I was horribly sick just before baginning and even worse just after; hut while talking to the attentive congregation for 45 minutes I lost eight of pain and nances in a very won derful manner. I was driven rapidly home in a carriage belonging to one of the breth ren from the country and for three days leid seids from regular work, in suffering that I wish to forget as completely as pos sible. By Wednesday night I was abla to take the field egain and my scattered con gregation speedily resseembled. I remained till the following Monday, at Houma, to make up to them the lost time. Every thing that love could do for me was done by the tender hearts and gentia hande whose ministrations I can never forget God bless them in the day when all three acts of heavenly unselfishness will come to light. This attack of sickness is a land mark in my own personal experience and I want to say a few things in connection therewith, that may be helpful to others For the first time in more than six years ! need what are popularly known as "the means" in common use in such attacke. ! was not driven to it by the argency of the case, but deliberately tried the remedies recommended because I wanted to settle as ! best could the question that has puzzled more than one faithful soul; wishing, on the one hand, to trust the LORD fully, and yei, on the other, shrinking from fen sticiem that seems to turn its back upon the experience of ages. "Yet acquainting mine heart with wisdom," I said, with Solomon. "(lo to now, I will prove thee" with medicine; "till I might see what was that good for the sone of men, which they should do under heaven all the days of their ilfe," when elckness came. How far ought one to use "the means" prescribed by medical science, while yet trusting the LORD? That was the very practical question under consideration. I was writhing in pain. For this I accepted that panacea of domestic practice - a mustard plaster. Similia similibus curentur. You cure pain with pain You fight the devil with fire. You ameliorale one agony by creeting another of inteneer character somewhere eise. I don't deny the medical principle of the thing. Far be it from me to limit the efficiency of mustard. I only remember how it girded me with live coals while it did its biting. fiery work upon my cuticule; and how for take castor oil, foilowed by quinine. "The only way to break it up." I was assured Se I took heroic doses of that famous extract of the seed of the Palma Christi, and revived the memories of my youth, when mother used to hold my nose firmly with one hand as she forced that awful table apoon filled to the brim with oleaginous horror into my nawilling month; and amid gurglinge and gaspings of mingled rage and disgues, that inexprebie oll went slowly down my throat Oh, how hard it was to awallow! It was so thick! Why has no philanthropist ever devised a plan for thinning castor oil? Not to lose a drop of the precious aperient, I well remember how my dear mother used GOD IS IS LOVE And NOTHING ELSE in scrape from my chin the few relics of the dose that I had succeeded in denving itsgrees at first. Vain delusion! It was only a little useless delay. Batter for me had I taken all in at once, "like a good boy," as I had been tenderly exhorted to do. But I wasn't a good boy. So I had my nose held, and was duly scraped with the spoon, and pondence. It "came in like a lamb" and is horror of horror, had to lick it out cleen. as a crowning misery and degredation; and was dismissed howling, with an insulting crust ol dry bread, to be chewed slowly, to lake the taste out of my mouth." How it all came back to me the other day when I was offered the same nanscous dose, as cunningly disguised as kindness could do it, aubstance that I used to take "straight" in my hapless borhood. Yes! I believe in cas tor oil! It le a very Samson with unshoru "fat" aplinters to start it with. As he went locks in its power to move the gates of Gaza. I am slowly recovering, after nearly volume of resinous smoke pervading the two weeks, from the drastic remedy, that science prescribes. The quinine set bees to liquor. He called Hamilton out in the afan odor in all my life. Sweeter by far then buzzing and trip hammers to thumping in ternoon and accused him of being his eneuse that specific. Yes! I believe in quinine too. My malarial symptoms vanished between this cross fire of potent remedies.

Well, do you ask what I think now? I

The Idiosynerasles of members form u comical pluse to ciub life. A prominent type is the constitutional "growler," and his opportunity alto the easy going, good natured man who le delighted with everything. Generally growlers are the most numerous. They are never satisfied with anything, though while complaining they never suggest a remedy. The growler" maker makes any allawance for mislakes or necidents. His cla f griovance concerns the waiters, who are slow, careless, His orders are always filled centrary to his directions, yet investigation reveals that if there was my carelessness it was his own in not giving explicit instructions. He can always get everything he wants much better and chenper cutside of the club. 110 confinially threatens to resign, but never does. He regularly predicts the decime and dissolution of the chib. He soon alienates the fraternal estes in of the better class of menibers, and the others quietly make a butt of blin, and he takes their good humored deference to his sadly ventilated ideas as an evidence of his poquiarity and importance. Of course they are only "guying" ldm, as A loniz

The good natured apologist is an effect to the growler, and at the same time as much of a common unisance, as he always sounds the same indiscriminate praises, and only needs un nudience to deliver a little oration on this or that subject that happens to be under discussion. In his epinion the club is the best and pleasantest in the world. The gossiper or chatterlox is, of course, found in the clubs, but he is more speedily extinguished in the little community than in the village by a general consure. As long as he confines himself to detailing the semulals in other clubs or of society he generally has a following whom he annes and interests by his recitals, which are invariable inaccurate. His tendency, however, leads him to recur to jocular scenes In the chili which by tacit consent all the participants seek to keep private, and so he involves himself in explanations which gen erally result in his reform from prudential motives or his resignation because he has more enemies than friends in the club. When he contracts the ungentlemanty and knavish habit of overhearing conversations and afterward alinding to the subject he wears a rope which soon tiguratively hange him.

"THE NEWSPAPER FIRND"

There is also the "newspaper flend," who selfishly gathers all the papers or latest magarines about him. The disputations member, who always disagrees, is soon so emphatically "sat down upon" that he subsides. The man who weeks to back all of his assertious or Ic sottle all questions by bets is generally entrapped by the sportive, jocular element, so that he seen learns wisdom and prudence.

The membership may be divided into three classes, the selate, the conventional, and the progressive in the younger clubs, and into two in the more orthodox clubs, the conser vative and the progressive. As a rule members frequent their clubs for social recrea tion, to commune with their friends therein, to read the papers or magazines, to while away the time in the bililard or card room, and each develops an individuality that is soon recognized, so that it is safe to predict just what chair he will occupy, what course be will take on coming in, whether he will neck the seclusion of the library or the "life" of the billiard room, which is generally the liveliest place in the club. The various coterles of the little community always offer association. These coterles are dull or vivacious according to their personality.
There is always a circle about the raconteur, in the clubs where there are planes there is generally singing and playing in the evening. The piano is not permitted in the orthodox clubs. It savors of the concert hall. There is often some very good playing and singing et these imprompts musicales. The choruses are especially stirring. For the time the musical cotorle rules, but they seldem become objectionable, unless to the chronic growler. The accommodations enable each coterio to keep to themselves if so disposed; that is those who wish quiet can secure it in the hbrary or parlors. There is generally a common resort, and there the pinno is generally situated, and liquid refreshments are served. General goodfellowship prevnils here. The stories are told for the edification of all. The conventional undertone of general conversation is not observed. Every one talks pro bogo publico, or at all events thinks he does If there is any musical talent it is developed Everybody is pleased at the intornial gather ing except the growler. He is uncerement-ously made the butt of the crowd

THE MAN OF MICH MAIL

There is one other member who always recoives a good interest shot from all whom he offends. He is the one who has so large a mail that the box bearing his Initials is always crowded with his letters. As a rule, the mail in a club is comparatively light considering the membership, us only the limited number of frequenting members have their letters addressed there. The letter fiend is the companion of the newspaper flend. He is generally a retired business man, and not a literary member, as might be supposed. Notwithstanding the check system there is always some good natured dispute about exchanged ints and umbrelias, and once in a while the overcoats get mixed-generally after delivery-and strange documents are found in the pockets the next morning. The near sighted men do not make the absurd mistakes that are generally attributed to them, but they contribute their quota to the general ninusement by their unconscious blandering. The men with bad memories for names and faces create more trouble. They always get everything wrong. They often cause much confusion by their mistakes. The married men are the steadiest attendants outside of the habitues. It is calculated that during the first year of married bliss nothing will be seen of the member, but after that he comes arounil again, and is once more one of the boys. This, however, is a legend. The practical joker does not flourish in the club as in the community at large because his range is comparatively limited. He is soon found out

Another amusing phase of club life is the comical tendencies of some in chipping together and ordering meals. The figuring of these to reduce their expenses border on the ubsurd. The miser is, of course, not found in the club. The spendthrift generally runs his limit mid gets posted. The lesson does him good. If he is incorrigible he is soon dropped for non payment. The uninitiated either believe the ciub to be a resort of riotous living or a slow and dull resort, attractive only becaaso it is exclusivo; but it is neither-n little community with a common cause, with the usual types of character, excepting the de-prived.—New York Times.

DANGERS OF HYPNOTIZATION.

es of Hypnothin in the Treatment of Imbetto or Refractory Children. At a late meeting of the association of cientists at the congress of Nancy, France, fue papers were read by members, illustrat-Ing hi the most vivid terms various phases of this subject. It had been found effective in the cure of himacy, and hi controlling the natural halat of mind and strength of will exhibited in a normal state. M Liegeois, professor of law, in a summary of suggestions, pointed to the danger to lumnnity from the exercise of the hypnotic power. The subject may be made the victim of all manner of hallucination, and be reduced to n condition in which he is incapable of defense against criminal violence, and in which the most serious nets committed against him, leave no impression upon his memory after he is recalled to the natural state. He may receive suggestions tending to the commisslon of any given crime or misdemeanor after the lapse of several hours or days, and he will commit the act at the appointed time with a fatal certainty. The conclusions were that the persons suggesting a crimo to a hypnotized subject should be held responsible for it to the law, and that hypnotization should not be permitted, save in the presence of a witness, in whom entire confidence is placed.

Dr. Liebeault, from experiments in seventyseven cases, was enabled to say that hypnotis treatment had been successful in curing children, adults and aged persons of weaknesses. in connection with the natural functions of the body. Ity means of suggestion during induced sleep he was enabled to re-establish the disturbed harmony in every instance,

Dr. Berilion formulated the following conclusions in regard to the use of hypnotism as an educating influence: That in the treatment of children who are merely indolent, indocile or mediocre the power should be limited to verbal suggestion in the wakeful state the children being inspired with the most perfect confidence. Each child should be iso-in advance of the others. Mr. Brooks, who lated, and, with a hand placed upon its fore-head, should be addressed in language indicating gentleness, precision and patience. The hypnotic state might be induced in the treatment of children who are impulsive, refractory, incapable of the least attention or application and manifesting an irresistible tendency toward evil. During the hypnotic sleep the suggestions have more power. They make a profound and desirable Impression, it is possible in many cases, by frequently repeating them, to develop the faculty of attention in subjects hitherto intractable, to correct had tendencies and to recall to virtue spirits which otherwise would be hopelessly lost.-M. L. Holbrook in Herald of Health,

The Coves and Cove Dwelters. One of the curiosities of Vicksburg during the stego was tipe enves and the cave dwellers. There was no lack of hills in the city, and into these the people-non-combatants especially-lurrowed like rats. And here they ate, drank and slept and-sometimes died. Of course these places were of all sizes, big and little, some mere holes and others very commodious liabitations containing a number of rooms. The size or style of the house depended entirely upon the whim or wants of the builder. The best were dug on the steep, straight sides of the highest hills, through which they sometimes extended, with several entries and exits by which one might have some chance of escape in case of danger. The most of them, however, were the veriest death traps. A cave in was a matter of frequent occurrence, as the fall of a shell on the top of one of these hills was almost sure to bring down the upper part of the cave. One night, during a heavy bombardment, the Rev. Mr. Lord came to Mrs. Eggleston's and asked permission to stay there all night. His enve had fallen in and one of his children had been buried in it. The child was rescued nlive after considerable difficulty.-W. C. Wilde in Philadelphia Times.

A good story is told of a French advocate who had made it a rule never to take up a case in which he did not thoroughly believe One day he chanced to be entertaining a dis tinguished company at dinner when he was informed that a client urgently requested a few minutes' interview. It turned out to be a man whose acquittal on the charge of stealing a watch he had that morning procured. Appearances had been strongly against the prisoner, who, it was thought, had been not n little assisted by the character of his connsel. Doubtless the poor fellow was impatient to express his gratitude, and an audience was not unwillingly accorded. He looked some-

BY NO MEANS AS ECCENTRIC AS HE SEEMED TO BE.

So Says the Veteran Journalist, Joe Howard, Jr.-Pour Instances From Which the Render Can Draw Whatever Inferences He Chauses.

Who can forget Horace Greeley's affectaflons of eccentricity?

He was by no manuer of means the fooi he assumed to be. That he was ambitious, anxions for for public favor and fon l of money, open to idultation and flattery, who that knew his life would presume to deny! How then can his nifectations of dress, for they were affectations, be necounted for, save or the theory of an unbalanced mind! Did it seem reasonable that a man after years of metropolitan life, at the head of a great, and at the time, the greatest journal in America, associating with the first men of his time, Identified with all broad movements in the Interest of his fellowmen could, unless by necident, make n guy of himself, morning, noon and night, unless he did it with intent? I recall four filestrations of intentional affectation on the part of Horize Greeley. The first was in Sacramente, Cal. A large audience had assembled to hear him speak and he was detained on the road. On arrival he was driven to the St. George hotel, and hurried to a room that he might partake of some refreshment and dress before his lecture. The impatience of the audience was assuaged by the announcement that Mr. Greeley was ndjusting his toilet, and making himself comfortable after a long and tedious stage ride. He reached the half at 9 o'clock.

Was be dressed! How! Precisely as when he left the stage coach He had not washed his face nor his hands. He hadn't changed a single article of his nttire, from coat to shirt, from collar to boots. Absolutely covered with dust, with eravat nwry, with collar dirty and rumpied, with front disarranged, with unpolished boots, he shambled into the hall, and up the long aisle, until, standing on the platform, dirty, ill kempt, unattractive, he faced an mullence manily of New England men and women, each arrayed in accordance with decorum.

What was that! Recentricity, oddness not only, but an affectation of the extremity of each.

On another occasion, in Paris, he, as a delegate from the United States to the great exposition, was notified to meet his fellow delegates in a specified salon. Mr. Greeley was the very personification of neatness and trimness, noticed that Mr. Greeley's trousers were hitched up over the leg of his boot, and nt some personal inconvenience having called his attention to it, kneeled and adjusted the garment. Later on in the reception room, where the delegates from all countries had met for a formal presentation, imagine the disgust and annoyance of Mr. Brooks when he saw that Mr. Greeley had redisarranged his tronsers, so that the bottoms of them still rested upon the legs of his boots,

What was that! Years after that I had occasion to call on Mr. Greeley in his home, relative to matters In Washington. He was ill and in bed. The bedstead was placed across the corner of the room. In the center was a revolving bookcase, against which rested a long mirror. Articles of clothing were strewn about the by the advice of his physician kept his bed just before the carnival opened. On the Sat- several days So far as confusion, malarrangement and upsidedownativeness were oncerned, that bedroom capped the climax. Was that intentional?

HIS NECKTIE AWRY.

The statue of Benjamin Franklin was set in some time after then in Printing House square, immediately in front of The Tribune A committee on arrangements provided places on the programme for I'rofessor Morse, Mr. Greeley and others. We were all to meet in The Tribune editorial rooms and go in procession to the statue. It was a memorable occasion, and every man pabl such respect to the proprieties as could be indicated by demeanor and costume. Mr. tireeley walked down the stairs arm in arm with Professor Morse, with the collar of his overcoat turned inwards, his necktie nwry and one leg of his trousers hitched up on top of his boot.

Was that Intentional or necidental! Horaco Greeley was a man packed with affect tations. I always believed his eccentricities to be assumed because they were such palpable contradictions of all that he saw about him, of all he lenrned of his unusual attrition with men of the world. He was proud of the oddity he presented. It gratified him to be pointed ent as peculiar, as distinct in his peromility from his fellows. An evidence of weakness you think! Why certainly an evidence of weakness in one of the greatest, one of the grandest men known to American history. He would have been a brave man who dared pronounce Horney Greeley insane by reason of these peculiar developments, and yet it is difficult to reconcile his unquestioned ability, his world wide experience, his rare power of thought, his competency in argument, with these petty developments of vanity and of self satisfaction. When you come to think of it you will fluit evidence of eccentricity in nearly all the men and women of prominence you ever heard of -Joe Howard in Kansas City Journal.

Stanford and Stockbridge.

Senator Stanford is looking forward with great plensure to meeting Senator-elect Stockhridge, of Michigan. He learned yesterday that Stockbridge was nn admirer of his famous horse Electioneer. The wny he lenrned it was a little peculiar. Some time age Martin, Senator Stanford's manager at the famous l'aio Alto farm in California, where, besides Electioneer, there are thirty other ningnificent stallions, indvised the senntor that he had sold two line 3-year-old stallions for $5,000 npiece. This was a good price, but the senator did not think it was enough, and telegraphed asking if the sale was absolute. Martin answered that it was, and, furthermore, that on his asking the purchaser if he insisted on taking the horses, his only answer was a draft by wire for $1,000 to bind the bargain. "The buyer knows horses," added Martin. "He's that new sen-

THE MOONSHINERS' ANCESTORS.

A Specutation Upon the Origin of the Rade Mountaineers.

The origin of the mountaineers that inhabit the ranges from Virginia to Arkansas is a subject that might tempt the curiosity of a serious historian. The vestiges of the early population, and of some of the singular episodic inroads that accompanied the steady llow of English colonization, are still plainly perceptible. From the semt-ducal plantations f the lang's favorites hi Virginia and the Carolinas many of those unfortunate or riminal wretches who were transported from the mother country to be penal slaves in the Helds of heartless, and mostly absentee, masters, escaped into the refuge of the mountains, and, animated by a desputring hope of freedom, sought the most inaccessible hiding

To the escaped convict, trembling under the remembrance of a master's fash and willing to dure any native danger to escape the davery to had fled, the approach of another refugee was as full of terror as of comfort. The runnway felon could trust nobody; or perhaps, he had a brand upon ins forelead to ride from curious eyes, and wherever he made his home it was kept remote from neighborhlp, and made as uninviting as possible to adventurous or suspicious eyes. There is fittle doubt that among the first settlers of the mountains were these British convlcts sold into slavery to the American plantations, and condemned to a life of laborious servitude, which they only escaped by such hardships as could tempt no free man. The free doneer and the woodsman pushed on across the mountains or through the passes and cleared for himself an empire and garden in fertile Kentucky and middle Tennesse, or ought the softer air and cotton lands of the Southern states. The escaped convict was afraid to venture in either direction, lest be should rush into the hunds of a former mester or overseer, who would identify and re-easlave

So, with that last instinct for personal freedom that has niways possessed the Cancasian race in every land, he clung to the mountains of his refuge, secure in his solitude and getting his peace in the impregnability of his retreat. It was, perhaps, an inherited instinct, therefore, that made the mountaineers hate negro shivery as bitter as the most determined abolitionists of the north, and which led them by force of fate to join the Union armies when the civil war came on. The mountain regions not only furnished the northern armles housands of soldiers but also maintained warm sympathy for the cause in the rear and front of the Union lines, and it is not singular, perhaps, that they have continued in sympathy with the Republican party as instinctively as has the emancipated negro. - Y. E. Alfison in Southern Bivouac.

Consumption Cured by a Car Ptatform, "You see this ear platform?" inquired one passenger of another on an Illinois Central suburban train. "Well, that platform cured ne of consumption and saved my life. think that's strange, don't you! Well, it is a little strange, but it's a fact. You see, I come of a consumptive family. My mother died of consumption, a sister and two brothers, and year ngo I expected to go in the same way. Don't look like it now, do I! Well, all thanks are due to this platform. It was in this way: As soon as I saw that I was going down I made up my mind to take some desperate neans of salvation. I wasn't financially able o go to California, or to travel anywhere except to and from my work. So I did the next best thing. Every morning in riding into town I stood out on the platform, and, drawing long breaths, filled my lungs full of the fresh air from the lake.

"At first I couldn't inhale much, but by and by my lungs gathered strength, respiratory cells that had long been unused began to open and admit nature's life giving oxygen, and in a few months I was surprised at my own strength and good health, as were my friends. Four times a day-for I role home to dinner and back again-I stood on the platform and inhaled as much of the nir as possible. The weather made no difference to ne-ralu, cold, snow, blizzard-for more than a year I haven't sat down in a railway coach. Now I can draw a longer inhalation than any man I know, and a long inhalation simply means filling with air nil of the cells of the lungs, bringing the whole system into service, as it were - and I have no more fear of con sumption. People who work indoors, and who never, under ordinary circumstances, get their lungs more than half filled with air, had better try my prescription. It is a wonder."-Chicago Herald.

Fashton in Gravestones.

"I suppose there are fashions in gravestones as well as in anything else!" "Certainly there are. The heavy style, such as one used to see naiversally in burying grounds up to twenty years ago, is becoming mutiquated and going out of fashlon. What takes now is the light, airy kind of work, with graceful entities, and of the material. Angels, small statues after the Greek, doves and fancy figures are now most in rogue. Next to them there is the rough style-just the hewn rock, showing the unpolished surface. That seems to be the best liked by mourners of a serious, contemplative turn of mind, while sentimental people prefer the other style."

"As to the degrees of grief now," it was asked, "did your experience teach you that young people sorrow more visibly and expengively over their dead than do mourners of

"From my own experience I should judge that aged people are more apt to spend their money freely in fine tombstones than younger persons. It may be that young folks feel it as much as older ones, but they haven't got the money to spend, you see, as a rule. I know I often have trouble enough collecting my bills from such people, even if it's for nothing heavier than a little baby angel. Widows, I must may, as a rule are good customers; widowers, not nearly so much. And that's as true of the young as of the old, perhaps even truer of the young ones."

"Do widows who have buried successive husbands show just as poignant grief-as expressed on tombstones-on the demise of their econd or third husband as on that of the

"Well, now, that's a ticklish question to ask," replied the artist. "I couldn't be sure of it; still, if I can judge from what I've seen, I should say that the widow's grief becomes all the stronger on putting her second or third one under the sod."-New York Mail and Express.

THIS GOOD OLD STAND-BY accomplishes for everybody exactly what is claimed for it. One of the reasons for the great popularity of the Mustang Liniment is found in its universal applicability. Everybody needs such a medicine. The Lumberman needs It to case of accident. The Honzewife needs it for general family use. The Canaler needs it for his teams and his men. The Mechanic needs it always on his work

The Miner needs it in case of emergency. The Pieneer needs it—can't get along without it.
The Farmer needs it in his house, his stable, and his stock yard. The Steamboat man or the Boatman needs t in itberal supply affoat and ashore.

The Horse-fancier needs it-it is his best riend and safest reliance. The Stock-grower needs it-it with save him neusands of dollars and a world of trouble. The Railroad man needs it and witt need it so ong as his life is a round of accidents and dangers.

The Backwoodsman needs it. There is nothing like it as an antidote for the dangers to tife, imb and comfort which surround the floneer.

The Merchant needs it about his store among his employees. Accidents will impeen, and when these come the Mustang Liniment is wanted at once.

CHARACTERISTIC GESTURES AND GALLANTRIES OF THE PEOPLE.

Peculiar Method of Shrugging the Shouldern-How Wealth la Indicated-A Sign of Greeting-Hand Shaking-A Farewell-Clapping the Hands.

The Mexicans are adepts at expressing themseives by means of signs and gestures, and many of them exhibit a courtly grace and profound gallantry which, if amusing to a foreigner, is also worthy of admiration. A lady who has traveled in all parts of the republic and made a study of these national peculiarities recently described them to your correspondent, and many of her observatious were very interesting. She said:

"When any one falls down it is customary to cali out: 'Come here and I'li pick you up, or to express the same sentiment by a gesture. The hand is held up vertically, palm outward, about level with the face. The fingers are then bent down rapidly and in the direction of the person addressed, the motion being directly the reverse of beckening. Tossing the chin upward does not imply annoyance, as in most countries, or simply no, as in many European countries. It is simply an equivalent in Mexico for What do you want? or 'I don't understand.' Foreigners who try to rid themselves of the importunities of beggars by this signal, naturally increase their trials rather than bring them to a speedy termination.

The Mexican of refinement has a very peculiar method of shrugging his shoulders. He raises his shoulders slightly, stretches his arms down at his sides, hands open and palms ont, places his head a triffe on one side, uplifts his eyebrows and pulis his mouth down at the corners. These elaborate motions signify doubt, uncertainty, a difference of opinion or 'I told you so.' This is the fashionable manner of expressing trumph on being proved correct in regard to a prophecy or an argument.

INDICATIONS OF WEALTH. "Instead of tapping the pocket to indicate money or its influence, the Mexican holds up his thumb and forefinger, curved as if encircling a coin. The token or threat of corporal punishment is a siight, interal, horizontal movement of the hand, similar to the turn it takes in the act of beating eggs with a fork. The phrase 'a screw loose' is Illustrated by a boring motion of the index finger against the temple, but indicating not an aberration of the mind, as with Americans, but of the temper. When a Mexican wishes to denote a lot of people he brings together the tips of all the fingers of one hand, to represent crowding. The first time I ever saw this gesture—the holding up of the hand vertically, and thrusting it forward two or three times with a repellant or protesting motion-was at a party, where a lady who had held another's fan during a dance offered to return it, when the owner, seeing that her friend was using the little implement of challenge, insisted that she retain it. Not a word was spoken-the hand said it all. The same gesture is used to imply: 'Keep your seat,' 'Do not disturb yourself,' and the like.

"There is a sign of greeting used in the City of Mexico and the southern part of the republic that I have never seen in the north nor on the western slope, where the bow still rules. At the capital an acquaintance, whether gentleman or lady, in saluting one of either sex, lifts the open hand, palm toward one's self, and waves the fingers, or often only the two middle ones. It rather startles a foreigner at first, but it is really a very pretty and graceful mode of greeting. I have observed that it is most used when saluting from a little distance, as across the street, and it no doubt came into use because of tindensity of traffic, in which the bow might pass unperceived.

The Mexicans are very much given to hand shaking, and they are eminently a friendly and cordial race. It is the fashion among Américans to call their politeness superficial and insincere. I have not found it so, but I do admit that its formality is at times a little inconvenient. For instance, when one is in haste to catch a train or meet an appointment, oue cannot rush away with a hasty 'So long.' It would violate the conventionalities to depart without exchanging the customary elaborate farewells with each individual member of the circle. Then, in passing through a door, there is almost invariably a contest of courtesy as to who shall go lirst.

FAREWELL DEMONSTRATION. "The proper demonstration of foreweil between Mexican women is the light embrace, emphasized in the north by each patting with her right hand the other's shoulder; in the City of Mexico and thereabouts by a kiss on either cheek. Between women and men, a bow and a handshake, or the bow aione, is the correct thing, aithough in the interior the provincials employ at meeting and parting a modified form of the embrace, between persons of the opposite as well as of the same sex. More than once my breath has been taken away by a handsome young hacendadmeeting me literally with open arms. To my mind there is nothing prettier than this embrace, and the warm heared palmadita, or pat on the back, between two men who are friends, particularly between an old man and a young man. "Hundelapping is very common in Mexico, and in its oriental sense of summoning. It is I flatter myself that I can tell one of the difficult to account for all the peculiarities of chaps as soon as I see him. You see, the runners. Some of their excessive gailantry is the French, and this handclapping is clearly derived from the Moors through the Spaniards. It is recognized as a call all over the republic, aithough about the national capital it has been pretty weil supplanted by a peculiar, disagreeable sound—pst-t-! which always sets my teeth on edge. I believe this about exhaurts the gestures of general usage; of course there are infinitely numerous signs of special and arbitrary significance. The Mexicans, as a rule, are adopts at expression by

"As I have already touched on motions and manifestations not strictly to be classed as the other makes a clean breast of it.—Globegestures, I might strain a point and put in the general list the performance which, from its ursine regularity and monotony, is known as haciendo el oso, or, 'playing the bear,' and which means the fixed promenade of an enamored youth over a short beat, before or beneath the window of the adored object, in which he spends as many hours a day as his leisure will permit."—Cor. Ore Discovered by Electricity.

Leadville is excited over a new electric inslicator that is used to determine the location, from surface observations, of underground mineral bodies. It is the invention of a prominent electrician of Boston, and is constructed upon the theory that the strong electric currents shown by large mineral bodies can be utilized to locate the latter. The machino is a simpla affair, consisting of electrodes which connect with batteries in a box containing an electric needle. The influence of the electric subterranean currents upon the needic is supposed to indicate the presence of an ore body. - New York Sun.

Private Theatrical Boxes That Are Sumptuons in Their Appointments. The person who sits in the auditorium of the Metropolitan Opera house and looks around him finds himself encircled by two tiers of private boxes. At least the private boxes are all that strike him of his environments. These boxes are alike, as far as shape and furnishings are concerned. They are deep, broad and commodious enough. They were originally upholstered in yeliow veivet, which gave the house when it was opened a most bizarre aspect. Now they are all crimson and gold, and the effect is rich and harmonious. Some are in choicer locations than others, but all are in the main mere private boxes, such as are familiar adjuncts of the proscenium of any theatre, only larger and more sumptuous in their appointments than most theatrical boxes. But behind each of these boxes is a private room, the same size as the box itself. lnally these antercoms were fitted up in keeping with the open section to which they give access. But wealth demanded more than mere riciness of them. Taste and tastelessness have made great changes in the interests of display, and few, indeed, retain their orig-Inal sumptuous simplicity. Some box holders have transformed them into little drawing rooms, opuient in furnishings and decorations, where pictures ndorn the walls and costly bric-a brac abound. Some have made little alteration in their snuggeries, but when they take a party to the opera have them profusely decorated with flowers. In one way or another these nooks reflect the tastes and the babits, the pretensions and extravagances of their owners, and are the scene of many pleasant and some decidedly piquant social episodes.

It has got to be the fashion for ladies to hold regular evening levees in their nuterooms at the opera. They receive friends in them, and retire to them when the act happens to be a dull one. Business men even transact business in them. There is a good deal of loud talking and ill bred merriment in the boxes during the performances, but there would be much more if the antercoms were not so convenient Like every other new toy it chances upon, society seems to get a great deal of funout of them, and, considering the price it pays, one can warcely grudge it whatever pleasure it may reap from its investment.-Alfred Trumble in New York News.

Adelaide Nellson's Chitdhood.

A lady prominent in the social life of this city has in her employ as parier muid a woman from a little village in Yorkshire, England, where Adelaide Neilson was born. The woman says the actress had neither Spanish nor Oypsy blood in her veins, as she claimed, but was the child of a basket maker, a poor, drunken fellow, and a Yorkshire woman, a decent soul, but wretchedly poor. Lizzy Jones, as Miss Neilson was then known, was noted in the village for her beauty and her idleness. She spent all her time hanging about the shops and gathering all the news travelers and peddlers brought from the outside world. When she was 12 years old her uncle was going up to London, and Lizzy coaxed him to take her with him in his market wagon to see the great city. When they reached London bridge the girl dropped off the tail end of the cart and her family never heard of her again until they learned that the great Adelaide Neilson was their daughter Lizzy. Only five years had passed between the time that the barefooted country girl, who spoke with a strong Yorkshire accent, had dropped from the back of the cart and the time when she appeared as Juliet. In those five years she had attained the education and bearing of a gentlewoman and had mastered French and Italian and the still more difficult tongue for a Yorkshire peasant, pure English. - Philadelphia Press.

Looked Like the Jack of Spades. Mrs. English, the mother of Lucilie Western, an actress of merit and beanty in her day, toki an incident of her past theatrical career, in which a certain tragedian, of rather stout proportions, was the unfortunate hero. He was playing Macduff to her Lady Macbeth. The child who played one of the ap-paritions which warn Macbeth of Macduff became very fretful before the curtain went up, and began to weep copiously. "Lucille," said Mrs. English "brought the child a pack of old cards from the property room and endeavored to keep her interested in them until it was time for the infant to appear. 'This is the ace of spades, this is the king of hearts,' said Lucille, and this little fat fellow is the jack of spacies.' When it was time for the opparition to appear the child had finished its crying spell. 'Macbeth, beware,' It recited, 'Macbeth, beware of-here she became confused and looked hopelessly back for assistance. The gentieman who was playing Macduif waved his hands to attract her attention and tried to give her the cue by pointing to illuseif. In his short kiit, plumed bonnet and general rotundity of ligure he had a most unfortunate effect upon the infant. 'Oh, yes,' she said cheerfully, 'Macbeth, be-ware of the little man that looks like the jack of spades.' "-- Philadelphia Press.

SUGAR FROM COAL TAR.

THE NEW PRODUCT THAT GREATLY INTERESTS THE TRADE.

Curious Story of the Discovery of "Saccharine"-A Sweet That Is Not Susceptible to Fermentation-The Pactory la Germany.

One of the most eminent and respected of the younger chemists of Europe, Aifred Gordon Balanion, a pupil of Pasteur, and an authority in the counsels of the English scientific societies, spoke to me on the subject the other day, and showed me a cony of The New York Journal of Commerce of Dec. 6, which contained a leading article decrying the new product. He assured me that he had not the remotest interest in the fortunes of "saccharine," but as a chemist he had ind in terest enough in the matter to go to the factory at Magdeburg, study the processes thoronging, and secure samples of the article both in its original state, and as applied to fruits, syrups, and in the making of sugar and candy. At his invitation I spent an hour at his laboratory in Fenchurch avenue, and I can only hope that my account of his conversation will be as intelligible to scientists, sugar men, and the public generally as the talk itself was interesting and instructive to

To begin, it is a mistake to cali "saccharine," or, as it is scientifically known, benzoyl sulphonio imide, either an adulterant or an unworthy chemical trick. It is a great scientific development—an honest product, possessing marvelous properties. None of these is injurious; some, as will be shown later on, are in the highest degree valuable. It is an independent thing, to be judged on its own merits, and no more to be condemned because of its commercial effect on the sugar industry than the electric light principle was to be set aside because it affected gas stocks. A CURIOUS STORY.

The story of its discovery, like that of se many other now familiar secrets of science, is a curious one. A German chemist of dis tinetion named Fahlberg went to America some ten years ago as an expert in a customs case, which at the time attracted much attention, and which he finally won for his client as fagainst the United States government. Fahlberg decided to remain in America, and went, I believe, to Johns Hopkins university, where he became connected with the laboratory. He devoted himself wholly to research among coal tar products, or at least made this a specialty. One evening, after long labor over a variety of these compounds, he went to tea neglecting, in his haste, to wash his hands. When he put his hand to his mouth with his bread he noticed a strange, pungent eweetness, which came from every thing he touched. He ran back to the laboratory and, thrusting a finger into each of the numerous vessels, at last found the one which had produced the taste. Thus "saccharine" was discovered. It took a long time and much hard study to learn the philosophy of this production; it has taken eight years to reduce the manufacture of it to a commercial

It was formerly supposed that the physical quality of sweetness was typifled by the carbo-hydrates-that is, the sugars and those starches which by chemical treatment are brought into the group. But Fahlberg's practically and scientifically. It is 200 times eweeter than the best cane sugar, equal to unity. What is more extraordinary, it differs wholly in principle from all the carbohydrate group, that is, from all other known sugars-in not being susceptible to fermentation. Every housewife knows how preserved fruit mildews, how jam molds, and how yeast ferments and spoils. All these operations are on the sugar, heretofore an inseparable feature of all the awcetening processes. Hut you cannot produce fermentation in "saccharine. To the contrary, it is powerfully preservative—a quality it possessee in common with all the coal tar products. Of this I had some curious iliustrations from the samples Mr. Salamon had brought with him from Magdeburg. There were strawberries, for instance, put up over a year ago, which had never been cooked, and which preserved absolutely their flavor of the garden. The jam had been boiled, but with the non-fermenting "saccharfae" there was no boiling away, no need of skimming, which with ordinary sugar involves a loss of 10 per cent. It is not necessary to speak of other samples. Every one ran see what the effect must be, in uli these ines of production, of substituting for ordinary sugars a sweetening power which cannot ferment and which is strongly preserva-

ANOTHER INTERESTING QUALITY. Another novel and interesting quality of this new product is that it is strictly antidiabetic. It passes through the system absolutely untouched. German physicians are making much of this phase of the discovery, and there has already been established an independent factory for the manufacture of anti-diabetic bisenits for the use of the large class of patients to whom all sweetening has heretofore been forbidden. On this point there seems to be no possibility of doubt. I was shown copies of the declarations of Professors Leyden, of the Berlin university; Stadelmann, of the Heldelburg university; Stutzer, of Bonn, and Mosso and Adueco, of Turin, all made upon personai analyses, and ail highly commending the discovery as a gain, not only to commerce but to medical science. Professor Sir Henry Roscoe, in a lecture before the Royal institute here, has already described the new compound as "the most remarkable of the many remarkable products of coal tar." I use the word "compound" because "saccharine" is really a synthetic result, obtained by coalescing a number of substances upon the basis of a lerivative from coal tar. The factory at Magdeburg, over which Mr. Salamon went, is a mammoth establishment. embracing with its wharfage on the Eibe nearly a half square mile of ground. The machinery set up is of the sort to delight a scientist's heart, and the inventions of England, the United States, Germany, France and Russia have all contributed to it. When the start is made in February-the first deiiveries are made in March-between '00 and 300 workmen will be employed. Mr. Salamon does not credit the statement of The Journal of Commerce that there have been efforts "To beat up capital in London and Antwerp." There are only four, or, at the most, five parners in the firm of Fahlberg, List & Co., no one of whom is an English man. There is one Antwerp mun in the firm. They have put $500,000 in the business, and this, so far from being a stock company adventure, represents the faith of a few partners who have put their all into the busi-

own needs. The exchange editor is a painstaking, conscientions, methodicai man, always on the aiert, quick in appreciation, retentire in memory, shrewd in discernment. He reads closely, culis carefully, emits and amends, discards and digests, mever ignoring the fact that variety is a great essential. There are sentences to recast, words to soften, redundancies to prime, errors to correct, headings to be made, credits to be given, seasons to be considered, affinities to be preserved, consistencies to be respected. knows whether the matter is fresh or stale, whether it is appropriate, and whether he has used it before; he remembers that he is catering for many tastes; he makes raids in every direction; he lays the whole newspaper field under contribution; he persistently boils down," which with him is not a process of rewriting, but a happy faculty of expanging without destroying sense or continuity.

His genius is exhibited in the department, the items of which are similar and cohesivein the suggestive heads and sub heads, in the sparkle that is visible, in the sense of gratification which the render derives. No daily paper can be excinsively original; it would die of penderosity. Life is too short, and hence an embargo must be last upon the genins of its rivals. A bright elipped article is infinitely better than a stupid contributed article. The most ouccessful paper is the paper that is intelligently and consistently edited in all its departments, whether by pen or scissors. - Philadelphia Culi.

to continued in a neurotic case when no evident benefit is produced has recently been raised in a Hamburg law court. A medical man, having as a patient a merchant suffering from "nervousness," treated him by galvanism. Altogether he galvanized blia 415 times, but the nervousness did not disappear. Then came the matter of fees. The oum claimed was $556. The merchant disputed this on the ground that the treatment ought uot have been continued so long, as it was not producing any benefit. The court referred the matter to the medical board, which gave as its opinion that the doctor ought to have asked the patient, after some fifty sittings, whether he would like to continue them, as it was doubtful whether the treat ment was doing any good. The court, however, decined to necept this view, holding timt it was for the patient to say when he had tried the treatment as long as he was disposed to pay for it, und so gave judgment for the full amount claimed. This judgment seems to accord with the principle that applies to newspaper subscriptions. A man must pay for his paper as long as he takes it from the postoffice. - London Lancet.

Some one with a gift for figures might count up these clubs and arrange them in alphabetical order, for one of there times, in after ages, archaeologists may wish to know about them, and what do you suppose they will ever think of the "Manicure cinb," the very just to be been into the social circle, if nobody places it on record? This special cinb consists of ten members, devoted to the culture and improvement of finger nails, as its name implies. It meets once a week, and the prize condition of those 100 finger tips is something for the "professional" operator to dream about! After each fair member's mils have been duly examined and criticised by the "committee," a paper on the oubject of hands, their care and culture, is read, and then the club adjourns to a luncheon that drives fillert nails and half moons into the background for the time being.-lloston Herald.
